

A government mandated copy protection scheme on all broadcast content clearly interferes with fair use rights to make copies of the broadcast for later viewing by yourself. Fair use places no restriction on the number of copies you make (to ensure that the recording isn't lost, for example) as long as you only view them in your own home for a non-commercial purpose.